An Estonian writer, Friedebert Tuglas, has written that the person “Kaerajaan” was named after was a blacksmith of the Lääniste village, Jaan Matson (1858–1921), also known as Kaera-Jaan. He had once been merrily chasing girls in the Ahja Manor, and had been caught red-handed, as usual.

Fellow villagers had thereby crafted a teasing song starting with the words “Ai Kaara-Jaan, Kaara-Jaan, ai karga välja kaema” (Hi Kaara-Jaan, hi Kaara-Jaan, get out and take a look). Over the course of time, “Kaera-Jaan” developed into a folk song and a dance kaerajaan. Kaerajaan is danced at nearly every big national and village gathering. It is a merry and prancing dance that also keeps you warm and full of energy in the Estonian chilly weather.

Our restaurant wishes to combine Estonian history and current time – to be modern yet hold high our traditions. As Estonians are considered a singing and dancing nation enjoying a good-natured banter now and then, this jolly legend gave a name to our restaurant Kaerajaan!
